OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Asia Credit Index (JACI) Philippines gained 0.15% in even December as Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields moved higher by an average of 3 basis points. Yields on the longer-tenored RoPs maturing 2030 and 2034, however, fell by an average of 1.6 basis points.

Bond prices initially fell amid the release of strong November jobs data, as well as the US Senate and Congress's passage of a sweeping overhaul of the US tax code. US nonfarm payrolls increased by 228,000 for the month of November, beating the consensus estimate of 190,000. The unemployment rate remained unchanged at 4.1%. Strong jobs data could mean faster monetary policy tightening moving forward. On the other hand, the passage of the US tax code overhaul implied that President Trump could soon score his first major legislative triumph, causing investors to adopt a risk-on stance.

The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) meeting held during the month concluded with the decision to hike policy rates by 25 basis points. This marked the third rate hike for the year, and was in-line with market expectations. The Committee likewise released their updated economic projections, which presented a more positive view of the country's growth outlook, though there were very little changes in the interest rate outlook.

On the local front, inflation eased to 3.3% in November. This brought the year-to-date 11-month average figure to 3.2%, still well within the BSP's targeted range of 2-4% for 2017. Manageable inflation coupled with continued robust economic growth should allow the BSP to keep its policy rates accommodative.

Fund Performance. The Fund rose by 0.09% in December, underperforming the benchmark by 2 basis points.

Fund Strategy. The fund will maintain its duration of less than 1 and will continuously look into corporate bonds for yield enhancement.
